When it comes to the reassessment of historic resources in the General Plan, we need a process by which no hand full of citizens can force the blanket assessment of any neighborhood into a historic district. A full consensus building survey must take place along with a full vote of the neighborhood or area involved. At no time should any small group have the ability to disregard, disrespect the property rights of any citizen of neighbor, in an attempt to force the reassessment of the parties involved. Property rights and homeownership is a family value that runs deep, and individuals have and will sacrifice in many ways to buy and maintain their properties to the values that suit their life style and families. Let's get this right in the General Plan or we will have the fiasco again that is occurring in Baywood. Anna Kuhre
